

A Golf Holiday at St. Andrews and Other Locations

Golf is a tremendous sport. It is said by those who play to be one of the most relaxing hobbies there is, while also having the capacity to be highly competitive and exciting at the same time. Once a golfer has played a certain course enough times, he or she becomes familiar with how to play the course, and after a while, the excitement of playing there may begin to wane. A new challenge is required, a new course; a course which will provide new excitement, new challenges. It is the unknown, the challenge of playing a course for the first time and using your knowledge and skills to best play the course which is a huge part of the buzz of playing golf. Golf is popular with people of all ages, owing to its relatively low levels of physical exertion required; it is a sport many take up during retirement and is as popular with over 65's as fishing. Golf holidays are becoming increasingly popular with people who have acquired an appreciation of the sport, and are an excellent holiday for groups of people to enjoy whether you are an absolute beginner, amateur or even a pro. Some of the best golf courses in the world are open for members of the public to play on, that's right - the very same courses you see the pro's on television playing on, you can also play on them. The most famous golf course in the world is St. Andrews, in Scotland, where the game of golf first began. Because of its fame, St. Andrews is a course which is visited by golfing enthusiasts and fun players from the world over. If you plan on going on a golf holiday to St. Andrews, it is highly recommended you plan it through a reputable St. Andrews golf course tour operator whom will ensure your booking to play at the course is stable and proper. Not only this, but they take the hassle out of finding the very best accommodation for your group and cater to all of your specifications and requests and will basically take care of everything for you. One such operator is the Links Golf St. Andrews operator which is a long standing golf holiday provider which has operated for over twenty years and will provide you with a top-class golf holiday. Links Golf also operates as agents for other golf courses throughout the United Kingdom.
